CAMP DIX TROOPERS AT THE HORSE SHOW

Mounted and Equipped Party of 150 Will Be Feature at Bryn Mawr

Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J., Aug. 20. Dix's broncho busters, who won quite a reputation in Philadelphia on their appearance some weeks ago at the Country Club for Enlisted Men, will return to the Quaker City next month and will appear as one of the features of the Devon Horse Show, at Bryn Mawr, September 19, 20 and 21. Major Straw-bridge, of the quartermaster's corps, is looking after the Philadelphia end, while Frank Wandie, director of Knights of Columbus activities here, who piloted the first outfit, will again have direction of the show for the six men. Captain Turn-ham will likewise have charge of the party.

The men will leave here on Septem-ber 18, stopping overnight at Moorestown. The next day the party will arrive at Bryn Mawr late in the after-noon. The horses will have one day's rest prior to the exhibition. The party will include 150 mounted men, a pack train and a wagon train.

The following officers, now attached, are assigned to the Eighty-seventh Di- vision: Major Morton H. Taylor, Major Robert R. Stockbridge, Major George Wildes, Captain Harry L. Bray, Captain John Evers, Captain William Bell, Cap-tain Thomas B. Cotnam, Captain James E. Bramlet, Captain Howard R. Jarrell, Captain Ernest J. Johnson, Captain Rob-ert B. Price, Captain J. P. McDuffie, Lieutenant Bernard C. Cumfife, Lieuten-ant E. Ray Thompson, Lieutenant Ralph W. McGee, Lieutenant Harry Worley, Lieutenant A. L. Christian, Lieutenant Jay W. Ruffe, Lieutenant Fred Daniels, Lieutenant James A. Cowan, Lieutenant M. Y. Aldridge.

Orders which will prove good news to the noncommissioned officers who have spent long months in the depot barracks have been received from the War Department. They place a six-month limit on the time of a cadre shall spend in depot companies before they are assigned to fighting units. For months many of the men who have worn their chevrons have been held to form skeleton companies for the training of incoming recruits. They have seen men come and go, and later join forces here for overseas, while they have remained behind. But now all is changed, for hereafter every member of a training company cadre must after six months be transferred to a line organization. Noncommissioned officers are not to lose their grade by this transfer to other units, but many of them would be wil-ling to give up their chevrons for a chance to see some real action.

Men of the remount station, which is the advance guard of the depot, have an important part during the past week of instruction by Major Henry Daly, an experienced packer, who became ac-quainted with the Indian general Hugh L. Scott during the Indian campaign back in 1877.

GERMAN SPIES SPUN WEBS LIKE SPIDERS

United States Secret Service Picks Up Intricate Maze. Kaiser Plotter "Compromise Peace" for Humiliation and Subjection of World

By CARL W. ACKERMAN Copyright, 1918, by Public Ledger Co.

(This is the third and last installment of the "Spider Web" series, telling of enemy spies in neutral countries.) In a foreign neutral city, known for its sympathies to the cause of the Allies, there lived a German who posed as a retired merchant. He lived in the most expensive and exclusive hotel. He conversed with very few people publicly and these were usually neutrals or bellshers above sus-picion. Sometimes he would be seen departing in a motorcar and he would not return until early the following morning. Except for these midnight excursions there was nothing suspi-cious about him. There was no evi-dence that he was other than he re- presented himself to be. But in all neutral countries there are hundreds of men who do as he did. The busi-ness of every man cannot be known even to the police.

Interested in Fortifications

One evening, in conversation with an Allied subject who was above sus- picion, he showed a particular interest in fortifications, explaining his curi- osity by remarking that it was "a matter of habit." He had retired from business. His fortune was made. The war interested him, as it did every one else, and, as he had read many books on ancient fortifications he spent his spare hours comparing the past with the present.

Naturally this aroused suspicion, but suspicion is not enough to cause an arrest and conviction. The Allied police waited. For several weeks they were on their guard. Still there was no evidence against him. Through other sources they knew that certain military information of use to the enemy was being transmitted through this city. They could trace the re- sults in the town, but the trail would be lost. Finally they decided to have him arrested by the secret service of the country in which he was residing.

When the police appeared at his apartment he announced their mission he showed them a German diplomatic passport and claimed immunity from arrest. The officers, however, had been ordered to bring him to head- quarters. He explained. He ex- plained. He asked them to telephone to the German Minister. He said it was inconvenient to leave his rooms; that he was expecting important callers. In fact he did expect im- portant callers. He was taken to headquarters as he was, except that he was permitted to put on his hat and overcoat.

At the police station he again as- serted his "rights" and charged the officials with insulting a "friendly" nation. Because he had a diplomatic pass he was taken before the judge. He was searched after everything he permitted to communicate with the German Legation. It is not necessary to explain all the objections which he made. He wished to telephone first and he searched afterward, but the judge's order was final. In his pockets the police found several im- portant military reports regarding the American and Allied armies in France. They found letters authorizing him to report personally to German Great Headquarters. They discovered let- ters from agents whom he employed in France. In the possession of this "retired businessman" was all the evi- dence needed to establish the line of communication between men and women who were already under sus- picion in other cities. His arrest was the key to a military puzzle which had disturbed scores of Allied police for many months. And he was a Ger- man "diplomat."

Discovering the Web

It is only through the arrest of such men as this that the lines of the spider web are discovered. You know how it is when a spider begins to spin his web. The web in his home is camouflaged against some abandoned door or in some dark corner. Often you and I have walked into those webs without noticing them before. Often we have looked for them and found them invisible in certain lights; perfect and secure. Again we have seen them glisten in the sunlight and wondered why they could not be seen at other times of the day or night. Thus it is with the spider web of the spies. Today it is invisible. Tomorrow it is clear to all.

Against such needs as these the Allied and American secret service must work. They encounter drag- nets, naval and military nets, nets of decoy and reality. They must be per- terts in human nature and in the instincts of criminals. They must know languages, customs and religions. These men must be able to investigate and judge values. They must dis- tinguish a real clue from a false scent. They have to be versed in military and naval information, economic conditions and financial facts. The enemy has to be watched at all times and in all lines. Often months must pass before a puzzle is solved and even then the world in a single night. It will be a net of peace. The coming spy is the superspy. His task is to bring the world to the realization and humiliation of a Ger- man victory, "compromise peace" or a "German peace." The coming spy is the peace spy; the man with the olive branch and the patent medicine. He is to put the finishing touches upon the masterpieces of intrigue and de- ception which all of his predecessors have been working on. He is to be a new type, a new creation, a new model. The German army might have been crippled long ago and the German spies been checked if the spider web had been completely broken. During the last year the web had been tear- ing; it has been eaten in hundreds of places. There are more German agents in prison today than the outside world imagines. They have been caught everywhere and at all jobs. The Al- lied police have been sleepless and energetic. For more than a year now they have had the co-operation of the United States, and this new unity has proved effective. The German spy today is still as dangerous as he ever was, but the system has passed the point of its highest efficiency. To Ger- man success there is only one open road, one channel, one line in the enemy web. That is the road to a peace this year. Hence the appear- ance of the superspy.

Plans are being made today for the coming peace offensive. The German Government has promised the people peace this year by a German victory in the west. The battlecry for the eighth German war loan was "Peace in 1918." The corporations, the banks and the people subscribed nearly five billion marks. This is the largest loan ever raised in Germany. This money is to be used to fight this sum- mer and to make peace this fall. A great part of this fund will be at the disposal of the superspy. A new web of intrigue and deception will be spun around the world. It will glisten in the sunlight like a spider web across a cottage door. Behind it will be the present German Government. In the center will be the spider, the superspy.

U-BOATS LANDING SPIES, IS WARNING

America Tightens Defense Lines at News of Crews Set Ashore

CAPTAIN SEEN IN BAR

Washington Admits Almost Impossible to Stop Boats Beaching

Washington, Aug. 20.—Warning that German U-boats may be landing agents on our shores was given today. The Navy Department, however, is unable to say how many agents would be useful in Germany. Crews from U-boats are believed to have visited New York, Philadelphia, and even Washington, with their ears attuned to any bit of information that would be useful in Germany. The extreme length of the American coast line makes it almost impossible to prevent landings at night from the col- lapsible boats carried by submarines. It would be possible for enemy agents to move about for days and be picked up again at some deserted point by a pre- arranged plan. Necessity, therefore, for careful guarding of America's war secrets is ever greater now, officials say. The Navy Department, however, is rapidly increasing its activities against the U-boats, and the fact that no out- ward-bound transports have been sunk despite the efforts of the U-boats, is taken here as proof that the navy is "on the job."

THREATEN CIVIL WAR

Pro-German Papers Warn Spain Against Break With Berlin

By the Associated Press

Madrid, Aug. 20.—Germanophile news- papers, such as the A B C, the Tribuna and the Nacion, in commenting upon the note from Spain to Germany, the text of which has not been revealed, publish articles reflecting a threat of civil war in case of a rupture of relations with Germany. This has aroused an ener- getic protest from the newspapers friendly to the Allies.

Airman's Death Unconfirmed

Paris, Aug. 20.—Official confirmation of the reported death of Lieutenant Alan P. Winslow, of River Forest, Ill., an American airman, is lacking. Head- quarters of the American aviation ser- vice has not been able to confirm the report that he was killed nor has the American Red Cross received any ad- vices.
